SUFFRAGE MARTYR'S LIFE DEVOTED TO POOR AND OPPRESSED

Inez Milholland Boissevain From Childhood Worked for the Down trodden of Either Sex, Age or Color

NOW open a time in the history of a nation's life when a period of years ago, in a country far away, two little girls were born in Paris, France, the charming and beautiful daughters of the late Pierre Milholland and Miss Marie Boissevain. They were the only children of their parents, and from infancy they were objects of maternal care and attention. As they grew older, they were educated with the utmost care, and their education was not confined to the common schools, but was extended to the higher branches of learning. They were taught the arts of music and painting, and in every respect they were brought up as a perfect society. As they grew older, they married, and their marriage was a subject of universal rejoicing. The marriage was solemnized in the presence of their friends and relations, and they were presented with many presents, which were in every respect appropriate and fitting. They lived in perfect happiness, and their life was one of contentment and joy.
